This isn't one of your average estate planning books nor is it about wills and trusts for dummies or financial planners. It isn't about death, dying and bereavement. This is a personal journal to help guide you and your brother through some of the end-of-life planning together so that he will have the peace of mind knowing after his passing his family will not have to struggle through the challenges of lawyers and accountants and wills and courts and fighting over estates and. . . and. . . and. . . Its also about making the most of your remaining time together. Life happens. Some things you can't do much about. Others, you can. You are watching your brother die and you want the rest of your time together to count but you feel a bit helpless, and maybe not exact sure what to do. Heres a smart idea. Seize the opportunity to be his Strong Advocate. Your brother needs you to ensure that his final days are as calm, comfortable and pain free as possible. Someone to hold doctors accountable to the best treatment available. Someone to make sure that his personal affairs are in order and his family is looked after. He needs and trusts you to be his strong advocate, and to do it right. Think of this as your own personal journal for end-of-life planning for your brother, and not some cold impersonal off-the-shelf estate planning book about wills and trusts. Be confident that his journal will help guide you through some of the complexities of end-of-life planning as it prompts you to consider things like medical, financial, legal, spiritual, and estate organization.
