Excerpt from Wisconsin Renewable Resources: A Report on Research at the University of Wisconsin Into the Renewable Resources of Field, Forest, Lake, and Stream It might be pointed out that research is a continuing effort. As far as we can see today, there will never be a time when the acquisition of new knowledge will not be a useful pursuit for man. Each new finding, each fact acquired, has its own particular practical use; it is often most useful for opening new doors for further explorations into the unknown. Mans search into the mysteries of the universe and of life will go on; it is his nature that he must explore. The advances that have resulted from this quest in the past 300 years are but a portent of the future achievements, both practical and philosophic, that are to be had. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
