We watched them carrying mud, horsehair, and quantities of cotton twine, and when their house was finished we saw a long red streamer gaily waving from it in the wind. All summer the bright pennant fluttered in every breeze. The Robins reared their broods--one followed by another. I often wondered what the red flag was that was flaunted so boldly high above our heads and so far out of our reach. Autumn came. The birds had flown. Then one night the wind blew a terrible gale, and the next morning I found that a large bough had been broken off from the maple tree. It was the one that held in its forked branches the Robins nest. I picked it up, and, woven into its adobe walls, along with twine and horsehair, was a bright red satin ribbon, and resting in the bottom, thickly...
